Game over for Gemfields as it confirms plans to de-list from AIM

It's the end of the AIM road for Gemfields PLC (LON:GEM) and its investors after the ruby and emerald miner applied to cancel its listing on the junior market.

At the request of new majority owner Pallinghurst - which now owns more than 75% of Gemfields - the miner's AIM shares will be cancelled on 28 July.

Current shareholders have until 18 July to accept Pallinghurst's nil-premium, all-share offer or wind up having a stake in an unlisted company.

Gemfields said the de-listing will reduce the liquidity and marketability of any shares not sold to Pallinghurst and advised investors to "seriously consider" accepting the offer.

The company, which is the world's largest supplier of coloured gemstones, has repeatedly called Pallinghurst's "derisory" and "unsolicited".

Shares dipped 1.5% this morning to trade at 32.5p.

Company Synopsis:

Gemfields is a world leading supplier of responsibly sourced coloured gemstones. But we prefer to think of ourselves as more than just a mining company. We are pioneers at an exciting new frontier where mining, marketing, exploration and ethics meet. We oversee the mining and marketing of coloured gemstones from some of the world's finest gemstone deposits and we do so responsibly and transparently.
