accesso Technology hails St Louis deal

accesso Technology Group PLC (LON:ACSO) said its software will be deployed at the St Louis Aquarium and entertainment complex at Union Station in the US city.

It is teaming up with zoOceanarium Group, a zoo and aquarium developer, and Lodging Hospitality Management, a hospitality group, for the roll-out.

accesso's Siriusware technology will be used to power the destination's behind-the-scenes tours and animal encounters, in addition to general admission at the two-story, 120,000-square-foot aquarium, which is opening this winter.

Once the busiest terminal in the world

"Union Station was once one of the busiest rail terminals in the world. Today, it's a living piece of St Louis history," explained accesso chief executive Paul Noland.

"Through this agreement, our partners at zoOceanarium Group and Lodging Hospitality Management have allowed us to help usher the station into the future, with our streamlined feature-rich solutions.

"We are honoured to be partnering with these organisations at the ground floor and can't wait to watch history in the making as we begin writing the next chapters of Union Station's story together."

Financial terms of the deal were not disclosed.
