Uranium Energy building exciting portfolio as demand fundamentals improve

Uranium Energy chief executive Amir Adnani discusses the group's fully licensed and developed Hobson processing plant in Texas, which is an important strategic element of the group's growth plans. Processing and infrastructure is a premium component for uranium business, as availability has typically been limited, he explains. "So we're definitely in a strong position with Hobson as, really, the heart of what we call our hub and spoke strategy," he said. Adnani talks about the group's low cost and environmentally friendly approach to uranium mining, via in-situ recovery methods.
