Applied Graphene Materials' Jon Mabbitt on their 'protected, proven technology'

Jon Mabbitt, chief executive of Applied Graphene Materials (LON:AGM) tells Proactive's Andrew Scott they have their own proprietary manufacturing technique for making the raw material graphene but a lot of the company's expertise is in how to get that material to deliver on property enhancements which can be used in real applications.

"Where we've identified our graphene delivers best performance are in areas like paints and coatings and polymers and composites".

"We have what is called a bottom-up method of manufacturing graphene which differentiates us from people who are splitting graphite down ... we synthesise, we make the graphene and that delivers some really interesting properties in the raw material".
