Gold expected to surge even higher on back of global economic weakness

Mining Capital's Alastair Ford discusses what he describes as the stunning rise in gold as it's moved through $1500 this week.

"There are some pundits around who think it'll go higher, $1525 is the next target they're setting".

"I think there is some likelihood it will go higher - the real driver behind this is the weakness in the global economy and the strange movements in the international bond markets".
