FTSE 100 closes ahead as markets shake off last week's losses

- FTSE 100 closes up 66 points
- US pending home sales shot up by 44.3% in May,
- US benchmarks up

5pm: FTSE 100 closes 1.08% higher

FTSE 100 closed in positive territory on Monday as markets sought to put last week's losses behind them.

Britain's blue-chip benchmark finished up over 66 points, or 1.08%, at 6,225. Last week, the index shed around 2% over the course of the five days.

On Monday, midcap 250 also gained ground, advancing over 85 points at 17,198.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones Industrial Average shot up over 400 points at 25,416, the S&P 500 gained around 30 at 3,039, while Nasdaq added nearly 72 at 9,829.

"It promises to be a busy, but shortened week, with all eyes on the jobs report, released Thursday due to Friday's US bank holiday," said Chris Beauchamp, analyst at spreadbetter IG Index.

"After the increasing signs of worry last week about rising infection numbers in the US, the pessimistic mood appears to be morphing into one of grim resignation - investors now hope that renewed restrictions on activity might help to turn the tide once again."

3.50pm: US home sale data cheers

US pending home sales shot up by 44.3% in May, well above the consensus forecast of a 19.3% increase.

"This looks like a huge increase, but the index fell by a total of 44.2% in the two months to April, so it's not a full recovery; pending sales remain 10.6% below their February level," cautioned Ian Shepherdson, the chief economist at Pantheon Macroeconomics.

"These numbers are captured at the point contracts are signed, so activity was crushed during the lockdowns. The quick rebound suggests signings were mostly deferred, rather than cancelled. Pending sales lag mortgage applications, which have fully recovered - and more - from the COVID hit, so we expect home sales to rise further over the next few months," he continued.

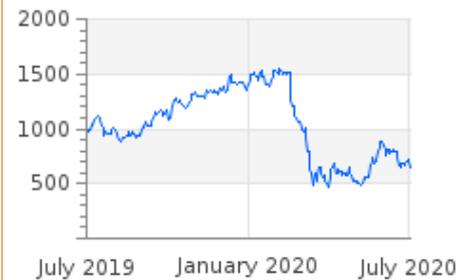

"The wave of job losses appears mostly to have hit younger renters rather than would-be home buyers, whose median age is about 47. For people who have kept the jobs, the drop in mortgage rates makes home purchase attractive," he added.

The numbers caused US stocks to perk up considerably, with the Dow up 418 points (1.7%) and the S&P 500 29 points

That, in turn, has fired up UK equities, which had been slowly relinquishing the morning's gains. The FTSE 100 is now 79 points (1.3%) firmer at 6,238.

2.55pm: Boeing distorts the picture in the US

US stocks got off to a mixed start despite what the performance of the Dow Jones index might suggest.

The Dow Jones 30-share index was 194 points to the good (0.8%) at 25,214 but that was almost entirely down to one stock - Boeing, which has been given permission to try to get its troubled 737 permission to fly again. The broader-based S&P 500 was barely changed.

Back in Blighty, the FTSE 100 was giving back the morning's gains, fading to 6,188, up 29 points (0.5%), despite sterling falling by three-tenths of a cent against the US dollar.

Oil giant BP PLC (LON:BP.), up 2.2% at 311.4p, was lending its support to the index after agreeing to sell its global petrochemicals business to INEOS for a total consideration of US$5bn.

"This is another reminder that the oil majors are currently trading at a large discount to fundamental valuations," said Peter Low, an energy analyst at equity research firm, Redburn.

It is 47 day since Ineos asked the UK Government for a £500 million bailout...

2.05pm: US to bounce back from Friday's fall

US markets are expected to bounce back from Friday's battering with some strong gains.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gave up 730 points on Friday, is expected to open around 204 points higher at 25,219. The S&P 500 is seen starting at around 3,027, up 18 points.

"Despite a tsunami of terrifying COVID-19 headlines throughout the weekend into Monday morning, the markets continued to err on the positive side of cautious," said Connor Campbell at Spreadex.

"The Dow Jones is set to join in with this baffling optimism when traders clock-in stateside," he added.

This may not be the time to point out that new US coronavirus cases yesterday jumped to 38,800 from 26,400 a week earlier, which is a 47.4% increase.

"The US is on course for 100K new cases per day by mid-July, unless changes in people's behaviour in the worst-hit states cause a slowdown in the rate of increase," warned Ian Shepherdson, the chief economist at Pantheon Macroeconomics.

"The seven-day moving average number of new cases rose in 37 states in the week through Sunday, with increases of more than 100% in Florida, Idaho, and Louisiana. New cases rose by more than 50% in Arkansas, Georgia, Nevada, Ohio, Texas and Wyoming," Shepherdson reported.

"The news is not all terrible. The proportion of positive tests nationally appears to have levelled-off at just over 7%, having risen from a sustained low of about 4½%. This is not yet definitive—we need to see more data—but at this time last week the share of positive tests was clearly trending higher," he noted.

In London, the FTSE 100 briefly forayed back above 6,200 and although it has subsided to 6,195, it is still up 36 points

12.20pm: Economic sentiment improves

The European Commission's Economic Sentiment Indicator (ESI) for the UK rose to 65.2 in June, from 61.7 in May.

A value of 100 represents the 1990-to-2019 average.

"The pick-up in the ESI in June adds to evidence that the UK economy is recovering, albeit at a slower pace than most others in Europe," observed Samuel Tombs, the chief UK economist at Pantheon Macroeconomics.

"The UK's ESI undershot the EU average, 74.8, in June by a substantial margin. Confidence ticked up across the manufacturing, retail, services and consumer sectors, but remained greatly below pre-Covid levels," he added.

"Services firms have remained the gloomiest of all, given that social distancing rules will impact their businesses in the second half of this year to a greater extent than others. Meanwhile, firms still plan to cut prices sharply in order to attempt to stimulate demand. The net balance of non-food retailers intending to increase prices rose to -10 in June, from -15 in May, but remained well below its +31 average in the 2010s. It points to core goods inflation declining to about -2.0% by August, from 0.1% in May, which would subtract 0.8pp [percentage points] from the headline rate," Tombs calculated, adding "that's probably a bit of a stretch, but the direction of travel is clear".

The FTSE 100 was up 31 points (0.5%) at 6,190.

This is to be expected as we entered the #Lockdown later & have relaxed measures later .

Also worth considering is that the economic sentiment indicator for the UK has run under the EU's since 2018 but has grown at essentially the same rate #DespiteBrexIt <https://t.co/f2BQnhLm3P>

Mortgage approvals for house purchases fell to a new record low of just 9,273 in May, according to Bank of England data.

The decline was from 15,851 in April, which in turn was a sharp fall from March's 56,145 approvals.

"The reduced level of mortgage approvals for house purchases in April and May occurred as the housing market was essentially brought to a standstill from late-March through to mid-May by the lockdown. The government advised homebuyers and renters to delay moving as much as they could while the emergency measures are in place. The lockdown introduced on 23 March to combat coronavirus meant that no visitors were allowed to visit properties while 'stay-at-home' measures were fully in force, including estate agents and surveys as well as potential buyers," explained Howard Archer, the chief economic advisor to the EY ITEM Club.

"The easing of restrictions for the Welsh, Northern Irish and Scottish (at end of month) housing markets occurred during June.

"There does appear to have been an immediate marked pick-up in housing market activity following the easing of restrictions - although it is questionable whether it will be sustained," Archer sated.

"For example, Rightmove reported in late June that 'Six weeks on from the English market reopening and sales agreed are 4% higher than pre-COVID levels - despite prolonged market closures in Scotland, Wales and N. Ireland. Rebound in activity [is] expected to subside in coming weeks as demand fell back 11% off a high base in [the] last two weeks, but [the] reopening of Welsh and Scottish markets will support near term demand'." Archer added.

Brutal! Bank of England data show mortgage approvals for house purchase at 9.3k in May. Down again from the already abysmal 15.9k recorded last month, and far below consensus expectation of 25k. Q2 approvals on track to fall 70% q/q as per our forecast from March. pic.twitter.com/yDF7FK9hy5

The figures did not come as a surprise and housebuilders such as Berkeley Group Holdings PLC (LON:BKG) and Persimmon PLC (LON:PSN) were among the more prominent blue-chip risers this morning, with the former up 2.3% at 4,200p and the latter 1.2% firmer at 2,310p.

The FTSE 100 was up 20 points (0.3%) at 6,179.

9.35am: Carnival sinks again

It took a while but expectations of a soft start for UK equities were realised with the Footsie dipping into the red.

London's index of blue-chip shares was down 21 points (0.3%) as the number of deaths worldwide attributed to the coronavirus topped half a million.

"Hopes of a robust economic recovery following the pandemic are now shattered. The risks of re-imposing lockdowns are high, and monetary policy stimulus which explains most of the recovery in asset prices from the March lows will become less effective going forward if it doesn't translate into a rebound in economic activity and better prospects for corporate earnings. Risk asset valuations remain elevated and the next few weeks ahead will tell us whether they will continue to hold or get bumped," said Hussein Sayed, the chief market strategist at FXTM.

If Sayed is right then investors seem to be taking the Domsday scenario in their stride even to the extent of eschewing some of the usual defensive stocks, such as supermarkets, consumer goods makers and tobacco pedlars.

Unilever PLC (LON:ULVR), down 2.1% at 4,424p, was the worst-performing blue-chip while supermarket stocks Wm Morrison Supermarkets PLC (LON:MRW), Tesco PLC (LON:TSCO), J Sainsbury PLC (LON:SBRY) and fellow-traveller Ocado Group PLC (LON:OCDO) were between 1.2% and 1.9% weaker.

Fags makers British American Tobacco PLC (LON:BATS) and Imperial Brands PLC (LON:IMB) were down 1.3% at 3,069p and 1.1% at 1,508.5p respectively.

Cruises operator Carnival PLC (LON:CCL), no longer dragging the Footsie below the Plimsoll line since its relegation to the FTSE 250, was down 4.5% at 925p after it announced the pricing of its senior secured term loan facility.

8.35am: Coronavirus second wave fears persist

The FTSE 100 defied the dour predictions of a sharply lower start to open the trading week in positive territory - though only just.

Even so, worries continue to persist over America's handling of the coronavirus outbreak, while traders also have a weather eye on a potential second wave.

Caution was the watchword after the global death toll blew past 500,000 at the weekend and certain US states began to reassess lockdown restrictions.

"Monday's markets are likely to be dominated by the same stories as second wave fears are not only isolated to the US," said James Hughes of Scope Markets.

"The UK and Germany are also trying to fight off the prospect, with the UK looking imposing its first localised lockdown in Leicester as the infection rate grows.

"This will be key for the UK and for markets as the success of local lockdown will be key in fighting the virus long term and making sure the economy isn't as hard as it has been for the last three months with a nationwide lockdown."

After a weekend of rhetoric from both the unions and executives over a planned 12,000 job cuts, British Airways owner IAG (LON:IAG) appeared to gain the backing of investors as its shares topped the Footsie, albeit with a lukewarm 1.5% advance.

Among the fallers was Unilever (LON:ULVR), down 1.9%. The Anglo-Dutch consumer staples giant was one of a cadre of big brand owners to pull advertising from Facebook over growing concerns about hate speech and divisive content.

At the end of March, the aircraft leasing group had a cash balance of US$131.6mln, said executive chairman Jeff Chatfield in the group's third quarter report. Chatfield added: "Immediately at the outset of the COVID-19 pandemic Avation instituted a programme of support for some of its airline customers to defer for later payment certain portions of their rent in the short term. The cashflow impact of this support programme has been mitigated by adjusting the amortisation profiles of the relevant financings with the agreement of lenders."

In a statement, Colin Bird, Bezant's executive chairman commented: "On behalf of myself and the Board I would like to take this opportunity to thank Laurence for his considerable contribution to the Company and wish him well in his future endeavours. The last couple of years have not been an easy period for junior exploration companies, and as Chief Executive Officer Laurence has helped Bezant re-align its strategy and develop a clear copper-gold focus." Bird added: "The Company is in the process of finalising the appointment of members to the management team to support the technical requirements of its interest in the Kalengwa copper gold project in Zambia acquired in April 2020 and the Hope Copper-Gold project in Namibia which is currently under due diligence and will announce details in due course."

EQTEC PLC (LON:EQT) has formed an agreement with Ireland's Carbon Sole Group to jointly develop green energy solutions for the Irish market. The first two proposed sites are already zoned for enterprise or industrial use and are suitable for heat and electricity generation using biofuels, the companies said.

Equals Group PLC (LON:EQLS), the e-banking and international payments group, said revenues have returned to more normal levels after the initial impact of the coronavirus lockdown. Overall revenues in 2020 are running at around £108,000 a day versus £11,000 in 2019, the company said in its results statement for 2019. It noted that this year's revenue streams in both the business-to-business (B2B) segment and retail banking remain robust while, as one might expect given the strict restrictions on overseas travel, the business-to-consumer (B2C) operations have been hit hard by the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, especially in March and April although things have been improving in the last two months.

The AIM-listed business reported that continuing revenues increased by 22% to £11.5m in the year to December 31, 2019, while the group saw an £800,000 swing to a pre-tax profit of £84,000 from a loss of £741,000. Both the interim management and Solutions arms of the business increased revenues over the year by more than 50%, Norman Broadbent said.

ReNeuron Group PLC (LOM:RENE) said its treatment for a hereditary form of progressive blindness has been shown to have a "meaningful effect" for all points measured up to 18 months. Its study of its human retinal progenitor cell (hRPC) therapy showed the single retinitis pigmentosa patient dosed a year and a half ago was able to read 16 more letters from a standard chart with the treated eye than with the untreated eye. Chief executive Olav Hellebø said: "The persistence of the observed clinical benefit is particularly encouraging."

Haydale Graphene Industries PLC (LON:HAYD) said it has moved to phase 2 of its collaboration with Thai petrochemicals giant IRPC. The pair are working to develop transparent graphene and functionalised acetylene black conductive inks for tracking and communications technologies such as RFID and NFC and "related applications". Initially, the royalty rate will be 1.25%, but it will drop once Trident's US$5m outlay has been covered, down to 0.3%, and then subsequently down to 0.2% once the royalty has been paid on 575,000 tonnes of copper cathode.

Solo Oil PLC (LON:SOLO) said it has arranged a US$5m financing facility to meet its commitments on the Ntorya prospect in Tanzania while it negotiates the sale of its stake. Financier Prolific Basins is providing the money through a tranching investment structure that Solo said allows it to have a flexible funding option in place, should it be required, for the planned appraisal programme on Ntorya. Solo also said it is to switch its strategy going forward towards energy transition opportunities in the European power sector including gas storage, gas peaking and battery storage.

Oriole Resources PLC (LON:ORR) has initiated a 10,000 metre air core drilling campaign at the Faré target on its Senala project in Senegal, where joint venture partner IAMGOLD Corporation has the option to spend up to US$8m to earn a 70% interest. The mine has historic recorded production of about 1.8m ounces of gold averaging around 15 grams per tonne and was closed in 2012 due to the low gold price at that time. The miner said it plans to re-open the mine as soon as practicably possible as the gold price has more than doubled since 2012.

Significant progress has now been made towards a major expansion of the existing processing operation, with the new equipment installed increasing capacity to 60 tonnes of vanadium pentoxide per month.

Pembridge Resources PLC (LSE: PERE) booked a loss of US$13m in the year to December 2019. That loss included a US$6.4m charge which reflected costs of re-starting operations at the Minto copper mine in Canada during the period. "The financial results for 2019 reflect the investment made and costs incurred to acquire and restart the Minto mine," said Gati Al-Jebouri, chief executive of Pembridge.

SIMEC Atlantis Energy Ltd (LON:SAE) said it will publish its full-year results and annual report between August 7 and 14 after being given an extension due to the coronavirus pandemic. Canadian Overseas Petroleum Limited (LON:COPL) (CSE:XOP) has entered into a non-brokered subscription agreement with an investor for a £500,000 equity placing at 0.3p per common share. The international oil and gas exploration and development company, which is focused on sub-Saharan Africa, said the subscription is an upsize, or similar, of a previous placement announced on June 23 with the same investor. The company said the funds received from the placing will cover general working capital and enable it to continue focusing on its Nigerian OPL 226 project as disclosed on June 4, 2020.

6.15am: FTSE 100 set to open sharply lower

The FTSE 100 looks set to open sharply lower amid worries about a coronavirus second wave and the ability of the US to contain the outbreak.

Asia's main markets set the tone as the global death toll from the pandemic hit half a million.

Worrying was the decision by certain American states to reconsider easing lockdown restrictions.

"Rising infection rates in the US, which saw some US states either postpone their reopening's or close back down again, saw equity markets slide lower on the week on Friday, over concerns that any economic recovery may well take longer to take hold," said Michael Hewson of CMC Markets.

"In spite of these concerns the losses that we saw turned out to be fairly modest when compared to previous sessions, as well as previous weeks.

"There is no question that some investors are calling into question the pace of any recovery in economic output, with gold prices hitting their highest levels since October 2012.

"However, the reality remains that while there is concern about the economic impact of a second lockdown, the bar to another countrywide one being implemented remains very high indeed."

Gold, a haven investment in times of economic strife, found support at just under US$1,800 an ounce, while the price of crude oil eased amid worries that a faltering global economy will hit demand.

Looking ahead, it is expected to be a busy week for scheduled corporate news with updates expected from budget carrier easyJet (LON:EZJ), the supermarket chain Sainsbury (LON:SBRY) and Associated British Foods (LON:ABF), the owner of Primark.

Around the markets: Pound worth US$1.2368 (up 0.36%); gold changing hands for US$1,787.90 an ounce, up US$7.80; Brent crude US$40.15 a barrel, down 87 cents.
